MEMBERSHIP CAMPAIGN.

Begun with Enthusiasm Tuesday by Four Groups of Workers.

Pursuant to plans laid at a meeting held at the association rooms Monday night, the local Young Men's Christian association began on Tuesday a campaign for an increased membership, with the avowed object of making the income from the four classes of memberships in the organization. making the income from the four class-es of memberships in the organization, viz.: sustaining, full, limited and ju-nior, aggregate two thousand dollars a year. The campaigners are divided into groups; comprising older business men younger business men, mill em-ployes, high school boys and the like. From the enthusiasm with which the movement was inaugurated, success seems assured from the start.

The case of Mildredge H. Perry, a truckman of East Hartford, against Samuel Cooper of this city, occupied the attention of Judge Joel H. Reed in the superior court room Tuesday morning and part of the afternoon, it presented several interesting legal questions, and would undoubtedly have gone to a higher court had not the parties, acting on the advice of Judge Reed, come to a settlement after the case had gone into the judge's hands.

Perry, in the latter part of May, this year, brought Cooper's household goods from East Hartford to this city, for an agreed upon amount of $25. Some delay was occasioned here, and Perry was obliged to stay over night. After starting to unload the goods, he did not like Cooper's idea of depositing the cash with a third party until an inspection of the condition of the goods could be made, and loaded up again and drove off, eventually stor-an inspection of the condition of the goods could be made, and loaded up again and drove off, eventually storing the goods in a building belonging to P. L. Lord on Walnut street. Five days later, Cooper replevined the goods and in the suit claimed damages for their retention as a counter-claim to the bill presented by Perry.

The testimony of the witnesses in the case took up the time until adjournment at 12.30. In the afternoon, after the case had been argued by Attorney P. J. Danahey for the defendant, and Terry J. Chapin of Hartford for the plaintiff, Judge Reed said that he would not give a decision at this time, but suggested that the differences be patched up out of court, if possible, rather than have the matter adjudicated over as small a sum as was involved. This was done, and the case eventually settled by the payment of ten dollars by Cooper to Perry.

Court then adjourned until Friday morning, the case of Noel vs. Latham, which was scheduled for today, con-tinuing until a later date on account of the illness of an important witness.

DUNN CALLS RALLY SMALL. Democrats Were Addressed by Speak ers of National Prominence,

The first gun of the democratic campaign in this vicinity was fired Tuesday night, when three hundred or more voters gathered in the Loomer Opera house to attend a rally in the interests of the party's candidates.

Previous to the speech-making the Willimantic American bank rendered popular eless on Main street bafes.

but this was the smallest number he had seen anywhere in the state. With a brief introduction he gave way to Hon. Homer S. Cummings of Stamford, who paid his honor a high compliment at the start, referring to him as the "rough diamond of democracy," and stating that if efficiency and honesty were any qualification, he would be returned to office this fall.

Mr. Cummings' speech was a flaving Mr. Cummings' speech was a flaying of the system of government as con-ducted by the republican party during

of the system of government as conducted by the republican party during its eighteen years of power, and a eulogy of the work of the present administration, which he said had kept its platform pledges and done what it had said would be done.

After expressing disapproval of Senator Brandegee's course in voting against popular election of senators, and then asking those whom he thought unfit to vote, to vote for him, the speaker turned to the international relations of the country and praised the way friendly relations had been sustained by President Wilson and Secretary of State Bryan with Japan and with Mexico and in violent contrast to the present dissension and horrible warfare in Europe. He lauded the president as the foremost citizen of the civilized world, and urged that his work be upheld by the return of a democratic congress.

Ex-Governor M. S. Ansel of South Carolina, an orator of the southern school, followed with a eulogy of President Wilson and a brief enumeration of the platform promises of the party, and their fulfilment. He too, laid great stress upon our international relations and enlarged upon the benefits to accrue from the new currency relations and enlarged upon the ben-efits to accrue from the new currency bill. His closing plea was for support of the president's policies by the elec-tion of democrats in the state and nation of democrats in the state and nation.

Mayor Dunn then announced that owing to iliness Congressman B. P. Mahan would not be present, and he closed the meeting with a brief eulogy of the local candidates and a plea for a democratic house, that the measures vetoed by a republican house at the last session might be passed. He drew laughter and applause when referring to the billboard statement "Vote for Brandegee, in the prime of life, he said, "in intelligence, knowledge and power Governor Baldwin is as young as Senator Brandegee, and I would rather take a policy of six years on the life of Governor Baldwin than on his opponent." He rapped the graft system in vegue at the capitol under aystem in vegue at the capital under his predecessors in power and closed with an earnest plea for the state ticket. This closed the meeting shortly before ten o'clock.
